Book Harvest

Book Harvest's mission is to provide books to and share the power of literacy with babies, children and families in need in central North Carolina. Having plenty of books at home helps children start kindergarten ready to learn, combat summer learning loss and helps children identify as readers. Book Babies puts Medicaid-eligible children on path to early literacy and school readiness, starting at birth. Once a newborn is enrolled in Book Babies, Book Harvest makes home visits, providing parents with literacy coaching and delivering 10 new books every 6 months over the next five years.

Wade Edwards Foundation (Hi Tech Teens)

The mission of the Wade Edwards Foundation and Learning Lab (WELL) is to provide the student community with opportunities for achievement, enrichment and service in preparation for personal and academic success. In partnership with Women in Computer Science (WiCS) at NC State University, this six-week, recurring program allows interested students to dive into computer science with a hands-on approach. Hi Tech Teens, a WELL program, is not just another opportunity for teens to get screen time. It is a deliberate opportunity for them to understand and explore what is behind the screen. Students work with mentors – young, successful students at NCSU and many currently working in the field of Computer Science – to complete project-based learning activities focused on designing, coding, and building websites, games and applications.

In addition, Hi Tech Teens specifically recruits girls and minorities as participants to change the trajectory of computer science away from being a white, male-dominated career field. By learning the basics of computer programming and practicing presentation skills, these students are opening up options to explore a wealth of career opportunities in computer science and technology.
